

Kristoffer Dolatko is one of the leading violin teachers in Denmark. He graduated from Feliks Nowowiejski School of Music in Gdansk (Poland), where he studied with Professor Krystyna Jurecka, before continuing his studies at the Stanislaw Moniuszko Academy of Music in Gdansk in the class of Professor Henryk Keszowski.

He moved from his native country, Poland, to Denmark in 1990. For many years, he has been playing in the Aalborg Symphony Orchestra and teaching at different music schools as well as at the Royal Academy of Music in Aarhus. He has also been invited to serve as a jury member for many competitions and summer courses. In 2008 he was appointed to the position of violin tutor at the famous and prestigious Chetham's School of Music in Manchester, where he was working with some of the most talented children from Great Britain and abroad for 12 years. Furthermore he is now teaching at the Danish National Academy of Music (SDMK - Syddansk Musikkonservatorium in Odense/Esbjerg. For many years he was involved in YOMA (Young Musicians Academy) due to his employment at the National Center for Music Talents (Nationellt centrum för musiktalanger) in Vänersborg.

His students have won numerous prizes at national and international competitions. Kristoffer is continuously exploring and searching for new methods of teaching, practising and developing talented young musicians in the best possible way.

This year, he is going to publish a book: "DIVIDE et IMPERA" (DIVIDE and RULE) - a reliable system of left hand exercises, designed to give a thorough knowledge of the fingerboard, and help to maintain good physical form, leading to improved intonation and a greater capacity to learn new pieces more quickly.
